To examine the effect of highly active antiretroviral therapy (HAART) on monocyte binding to TNF-alpha and LPS. Peripheral blood monocytes were isolated from 44 HIV-1 infected patients and 21 HIV-1 negative control subjects, and preincubated with anti-CD14 beads to reduce nonspecific binding. The cells were washed twice and incubated with or without TNF-alpha or LPS for 15 minutes at 37 degrees C. The cells were washed three times and the amount of bound TNF-alpha and LPS were determined by ELISA. Binding of TNF-alpha and LPS to monocytes from untreated HIV-1 infected patients was similar to that of HIV-1 negative control subjects, but these binding parameters were reduced by 52% and 86%, respectively, in patients receiving HAART. These results indicate that the effects of HAART on monocyte TNF-alpha and LPS binding are more profound than the effects observed on monocyte activation, and that TNF-alpha and LPS binding may be more sensitive indicators of immune dysfunction during HAART than are measures of monocyte activation.
