In vivo modelling of human post-infarction left ventricular aneurysm formation: an alternative to current techniques. For clinical trials of novel cardiomyoplasty and infarct remodelling strategies, a validated in vivo model is required that reflects the morphological, mechanical and electrical changes associated with chronic infarction. We have developed and validated a small animal model of chronic post-infarction left ventricular aneurysm in the rat by demonstrating that sustained partial left coronary ligation induces scar formation, expansion of the infarct and left ventricular dilatation. The size of the left ventricle was 7.9 ± 0.2 g before infarction, 10.3 ± 0.4 g immediately after, and 16.2 ± 0.3 g 14 days later. The dilated left ventricle has increased systolic (3.2 ± 0.5 kN) and diastolic (0.97 ± 0.09 kN) wall stress, the pressure gradient across the left ventricular aneurysm was 16.7 ± 3.1 mmHg at rest and decreased to 8.0 ± 1.3 mmHg with provocation with dobutamine infusion (PQ: UIWebView on ipad shows "Web page not available" i have an
