United States President Donald Trump is due to visit Britain next month for a working visit, after his first meeting with Theresa May. The UK government has previously insisted he will not be the first state visit, which in recent years has generally taken place with royal pageantry. But in a move that could be used as an opportunity to reignite the row about the state visit, The Sun has claimed the president will be the first US president to hold a state visit to Britain since 1945. Sources have suggested that Mr Trump may come to Britain for a simple working visit. A source told the newspaper: "The visit is being seen as a working visit, with a great deal of business and no grand state banquet. "President Trump will have a working meeting with Theresa May on a wide range of issues. "There will be a working lunch meeting and a working dinner but no state banquet or state banquet. “There will be no pageantry and there will not be any circus involved. “There will be a press conference with the PM and press invitation.” A spokesperson for the Prime Minister’s office declined to comment when asked for details of the working visit. I don't know what antivirus you have. They scan and remove a lot of stuff all the time. My antivirus does a good job at the moment. Just recently got a free one from Microsoft and that did a good job. We got infected by Clickbank by a.zip exploit. The antivirus detected the attack and removed it. Some antispyware free ones have been installed too. So just scanning is not enough. If you're afraid of it being detected by your antivirus you might want to see if you can't change the detection settings. I'm using AVG and I've never had a problem with malware. That's not to say that you won't, but I have never had any problems at all. I also have a free protection that comes with AVG (not the full version) and it's been through quite a few virus and spyware attacks. It's also probably the most compatible with other software that I've ever seen. I guess what I'm saying is that if you have one now, be happy with it and don't try to change it. And if you do try to change it, it's easy and you won't have any issues. I don't know what antivirus you have. They scan and remove a lot of
