The version history of this utility is available at the official website. Hepatitis C virus (HCV) is the major causative agent of post-transfusion and community-acquired non-A, non-B hepatitis. It has been estimated that there are 150 million people chronically infected with HCV and that there are 3-5 million new infections each year. HCV is a positive-stranded RNA virus in the Flaviviridae family. It is the only member of the genus Hepacivirus which does not cause severe disease in humans. HCV has been classified as a separate genus in the Flaviviridae family, which includes the genera flaviviruses, pestiviruses, and hepaciviruses. The genera flavivirus, pestivirus and hepacivirus include positive stranded RNA viruses which are about 50-70 nm in size. HCV has a 9.5 kb, positive-stranded genome which encodes a polyprotein of about 3,010 amino acids. The protein sequence of the polyprotein has been determined from several HCV isolates, as set forth in the polynucleotide sequence listing as GenBank Accession No. M7690. The polyprotein contains the structural proteins C, E1, E2, and p7 and nonstructural proteins NS2, NS3, NS4A, NS4B, NS5A, and NS5B. The structural proteins are encoded in the 5' half of the genome and have the following relative positions in the genome: the capsid protein (C) encoded by nucleotides 2841-3219; the envelope glycoprotein (E1) encoded by nucleotides 3238-3611; the envelope glycoprotein (E2) encoded by nucleotides 3622-3782; the p7 protein encoded by nucleotides 3725-3795; and the nonstructural (NS) proteins NS2, NS3, NS4A, NS4B, NS5A, and NS5B encoded by nucleotides 3612-3680, 3680-3782, 3622-3672, 3743-3811, 3811-3860, and 3876-4198, respectively. The nonstructural proteins are known to be involved in the HCV replication cycle. NS2 and NS3 are proteolytically processed by host signal peptidase and are required Id643396d6
