If you are new to this software, do not know how to use and support. I use it for. (Mac/Win)Â.Q: How to get JFreeChart column series from XYChartSeries I have a column chart, where the x-axis is the date range. So the data is 1. 1-Jan-2000 2. 2-Jan-2000 3. 3-Jan-2000 My problem is, I want to get all the data in a Jfreechart column series. I know I can get the data by using ((XYSeries)chart.getPlot().getDataset()).getSeriesAt(i) But that would just give me the values for the range 1 to 20, while I need the series for the whole month. I would have to iterate on all the series for the full month range and put them in an array. Is there a much simpler way? Or is there an easier way to get a series from a series? A: You can create a new series, and add it to your chart: public void addExtendingSeries() { Series s = new ExtendedListSeries(); s.setTitle("Extended List"); XYDataset sds = new XYZSeries(s); sds.add("aa", new int[]{10, 15, 20}); sds.add("bb", new int[]{5, 2, 11, 14, 8}); sds.add("cc", new int[]{6, 13, 2, 0, 10, 12, 5, 14}); sds.add("dd", new int[]{0, 7, 15, 2, 1, 5, 6, 10, 4, 11, 4, 11, 7}); 1cdb36666d

Cases with them might be missed if no other appropriate genes are sequenced. In this study, the overall concordance rate was 61.5%. No correlation was found between the clinical diagnosis and the pathological diagnosis for the 24 discordant cases. However, clinically diagnosed acral acanthosis was identical to acral hyperkeratosis in three cases. Clinically diagnosed pilar acanthosis was identical to acrosyringium in one case. Acral acanthosis and acrosyringium are subtypes of acral hyperkeratosis, and the pathologies in patients with them are similar to each other. Thus, a clinical diagnosis of acral hyperkeratosis can be made if acral acanthosis or acrosyringium is present. In addition, there were two cases clinically diagnosed as palmoplantar keratoderma, but the pathologies were pachyonychia congenita. These two patients were newly diagnosed with AA.

Although they had never been treated with retinoids, skin biopsy was performed. AA has been described as a disease complicated by other systemic diseases.[@B6],[@B8],[@B9] Thus, skin biopsy is indispensable for the diagnosis of AA. This study had a limitation in that it included only genetically confirmed cases. For genetically diagnosed cases, we could not include clinically diagnosed cases if no sequenced gene was found. In addition, it was too early to perform skin biopsy in clinically diagnosed cases. The incidence of AA might be underestimated. In the future, the incidence of AA could be increased by identifying the genetic cause for the disease and performing skin biopsy in clinically diagnosed cases. ![Clinical findings of patients with acral acanthosis. (A) Dry, white, and cracked skin with a velvety texture. (B) Total plucking of the skin on the right palm, as
